CLARKSON, David.

A celebrated Nonconformist divine. Born at Bradford, Yorkshire, 1622. Educated at Clare Hall, Cambridge. Became fellow of that college, and tutor to Tillotson, who succeeded him in his fellowship 1651. Held for some time the living of Mortlake, Surrey. Ejected 1662. Chosen co-pastor to Dr. Owen 1682, whom he succeeded 1683. Died 1686. A divine of extraordinary worth for solid judgment, moderation, acquaintance with the Fathers, great ministerial abilities, and upright life. The matter of his sermons is clear and deep, always judiciously derived from the text, and the language suitable to the oracles of God.

The practical divinity of the Papists discovered to be destructive to Christianity and men's souls. [Anon.] 4°. Lond. 1676

CLEMENS Romanus.

One of the earlieſt fathers of the Church. Said to have been born at Rome. By all the ancient writers he is accounted the ſame Clement whom St. Paul mentions among his fellow-labourers (Philip. 4. 3.) Suppoſed to have ſucceeded Anacletus as Biſhop of Rome, A.D. 91; and died 100. The ſecond epiſtle aſcribed to him is conſidered to be ſpurious.

CLEMENS Alexandrinus.

Titus Flavius Clemens, ſurnamed Alexandrinus from the ſuppoſed place of his birth, though it is conſidered more probable that he was an Athenian. He was originally a heathen philoſopher; and after his converſion to the Chriſtian faith, travelled over Greece, Calabria, Italy, Paleſtine, and Egypt, where he became preſbyter of the Church of Alexandria, and ſucceeded Pantænus in the catechetical ſchool. Died about A.D. 215 or 220. He ranks among the eminent fathers of the Church; a man of extenſive reading, and great learning and piety. The beſt edition of his works is that edited by Archbiſhop Potter, Oxf. 1715. 2 vol. folio, and reprinted at Venice, 1757. An edition in Greek only has been publiſhed at Leipſic, 1831, in 4 vol. Sm. 8°. 15*s.*

COMBER, Thomas, D.D., Dean of Durham.

Born at Westerham, Kent, 1644. Admitted of Sidney-Sussex College, Cambridge, 1659. Prebendary of York Cathedral 1677. Obtained the living of Thornton 1678. Precentor of York 1683. Dean of Durham 1691. Died 1699. His Companion to the Temple was originally published in several octavo volumes at different times; they were reprinted in two folios, the first of which came to a fourth edition (1701), of the second only one was published (1702). A new edition was published at the Clarendon Press, 1841, in 7 vol. 8°, without additions of any kind, and omitting the preface which Comber added to his later editions. It is the most complete work extant on the Common Prayer, abounding in learned references, and authorities. All succeeding writers on the subject are largely indebted to it, particularly Wheatley.

COMMINES, Philippe de.

Born 1445; died 1509. This diſtinguiſhed writer was ſucceſſively the confidential miniſter of Charles the Bold, Duke of Burgundy, and of Louis XI., King of France. He is the firſt French hiſtorian who has riſen above the merits of a mere narrator. He judges men and events with a great deal of impartiality, and if he does not diſplay any paſſionate zeal for virtue, he everywhere ſhows the ruling hand of Providence directing human affairs.

CONCILIA. Sacroſancta Concilia, ad regiam editionem exacta, quæ olim quarta parte prodiit auctior. Studio Philip. Labbei, et Gabr. Coſſartii. Nunc verò integre, inſertis Stephani Baluzii et Joannis Harduini additamentis, plurimis præterea undicunque conquiſitis monumentis, notis inſuper ac obſervationibus, firmiori fundamento conciliorum epochas præcipue fulcientibus, longè locupletior et emendatior exhibetur. Curante Nicolao Coleti. 23 vol. Venet. 1728. Et ſupplementum J. D. Manſi, 6 vol. Lucæ, 1748–52. In all 29 vol. Folio.

This is the moſt complete collection extant of the Councils of the Church. It was reprinted, with the ſupplement incorporated, edited by Manſi, at Florence, 1757–98, in 31 vol. folio—a much-eſteemed and accurate edition; but it only reaches to the year 1509, while the edition by Coletus brings the councils down to the year 1727. The contents of Coletus are, therefore, here given. The following liſt will be found to contain the name of every pope (diſtinguiſhed by being printed in capitals), with the date at which he aſcended the papal chair; and the page in each volume where a life will be found, taken from the Liber Pontificalis of Damaſus, Anaſtaſius, &c.; alſo the name of every council, with the period in which it was held.

The names of general councils are printed in capitals.

CONFUCIUS.

A Chineſe philoſopher, born in the kingdom of Lou about 551 B.C. At the age of twenty-three he began to project a general reformation of the public manners, in accompliſhing which he met with uncommon ſucceſs, but his efforts being ultimately fruſtrated, he travelled in ſearch of another kingdom more diſpoſed to follow his precepts, but everywhere he found wars, tumults, and intrigues. He gathered many followers, and his books are ſtill regarded by the Chineſe as the fountain of wiſdom. Died in the ſeventy-third year of his age. An edition of his works with an Engliſh tranſlation was publiſhed by Mr. Marſhman at Serampore, 1809. (See an article on it in Quarterly Rev. 11. 332.) Another with a German tranſlation by Dr. Schott, 1826.

CONGREGATIONAL LECTURE.

Eſtabliſhed 1833 by the managers of the Congregational [Diſſenters'] Library. Among the objects for which this Lecture was eſtabliſhed were the following,—to illuſtrate the evidence and importance of the great doctrines of revelation, to exhibit the true principles of philology in their application to ſuch doctrines, to prove the accordance and identity of genuine philoſophy with the records and diſcoveries of Scripture, and to trace the errors and corruptions which have exiſted in the Chriſtian Church to their proper ſources, and by the connexion of ſound reaſoning with the honeſt interpretation of God's Holy Word, to point out the methods of refutation and counteraction.

CORPUS JURIS CANONICI.

The body of laws formed at different times for the government of the Church of Rome: 1. The Decretum Gratiani, firſt collected by Ivo, Biſhop of Chartres, in France, about the fourteenth year of Henry I. of England, and corrected A.D. 1150, by Gratian, a Benedictine monk; 2. The Decretals, collected from the letters of the popes, by order of Pope Gregory IX., A.D. 1230, in five books; 3. The ſixth book of Decretals made by order of Boniface VIII., in 1297; 4. The Clementines, or Decretals of Pope Clement V., publiſhed A.D. 1317, by order of John XXII.; 5. The Extravagantes, ſo called, becauſe not contained in the former Decretals, contains the conſtitutions of various popes down to 1483; and alſo the particular conſtitutions of John XXII. Gloſſes, or annotations, were written upon the whole by various learned men. The edition of 1671, deſcribed below, contains the gloſſes complete. In ſubſequent editions the gloſſes are abridged. That of 1687 is much eſteemed. The lateſt is by Richter, at Leipſic, 1839.

COSMAS, of Egypt.

Flouriſhed 535. Surnamed Indicopleuſtes, in conſequence of his voyage to the Eaſt Indies, where he went on mercantile affairs, but afterwards turned monk on his return home to his native city of Alexandria. Lardner makes conſiderable uſe of his Chriſtian topography in his Credibility of Scripture. This work, which remained in MS. until printed by Montfaucon, contains a deſcription of the numerous inſcriptions on the rocks in the deſert of Sinai, as ſeen by Coſmas, which have been recently deciphered by Mr. Forſter, and attributed to the children of Iſrael in their journey from Egypt.

CYRIL-LUCAR, Patriarch of Constantinople.

Born in the Isle of Candia 1572. Studied at Venice and Padua. Elevated to the patriarchate of Alexandria, and in 1621 elected to that of Constantinople. He was favourable to the Protestant religion, and was deposed and confined in the island of Rhodes. Afterwards he was restored; but in 1638 he was put to death by order of the Grand Seignior. Some interesting and able articles on Cyril Lucar will be found in the British Magazine for Sept. 1842, Dec. 1843, and Jan. and June 1844.

CYZICENUS. See Demetrius.

D'ACHERY, John Lucas.

Born at S. Quentin, in Picardy, 1609. Died 1685. After having made profession as a Benedictine in two different establishments, he at last settled in the Abbey of S. Germain des Prés, where he devoted himself to literary pursuits, and rendered very valuable services as a librarian. He published a variety of works, chiefly on mediæval divinity and ecclesiastical history. The first edition of the Spicilegium (1655–1677) forms thirteen 4°. volumes. Although sometimes preferred, on account of some prefaces omitted, and alterations made in the folio edition, yet the latter is better arranged, and contains additions. The Vetera Analecta of Mabillon forms a necessary addition to the work. See Mabillon.

Spicilegium, sive collectio veterum aliquot scriptorum qui in Galliæ bibliothecis delituerant: olim editum opera ac studio D. Lucæ d'Achery, presbyteri ac monachi ordinis Sancti Benedicti, congregationis S. Mauri. Nova editio priori accuratior, et infinitis prope mendis ad fidem MSS. codicum, quorum varias lectiones V. C. Stephanus Baluze, ac R. P. D. Edmundus Martene collegerunt, expurgata, per Ludovicum-Franciscum-Joseph De la Barre, Tornacensem. 3 vol. Folio. Par. 1723

DANÆUS, or DANEAU, Lambert.

An eminent French Proteſtant divine. Born at Orleans about 1530. Studied law, but afterwards became a preacher at Geneva, and Profeſſor of Divinity. In 1581 he went to Leyden. Paſtor at Caſtres 1582, where he died 1596.

A fruitful commentarie upon the twelve ſmall prophets, briefe, plaine, and eaſie, going over the ſame verſe by verſe, and ſhewing every where the method, points of doctrine, and figures of rhetoricke, with very neceſſarie fore-notes for the underſtanding both of theſe, and alſo all other the prophets. The text of the prophets, together with that of the quotations omitted by the author, faithfully ſupplied by the tranſlatour, and marginal notes very plentiful and profitable, ſo that it may in manner be counted a new booke. Written in Latine and tranſlated by John Stockwood, miniſter at Tunbridge. 4°. Lond. 1594

DANTE Alighieri.

An illuſtrious Italian poet. Born at Florence 1265. Died 1321. His great work, the Divina Commedia, is a kind of epic, in which the reader is led through Hell, Purgatory, and Paradiſe, each of which places exhibiting a motley aſſembly of real and mythological perſonages. The Inferno is the maſter-piece of Dante. The work is well tranſlated into Engliſh by Boyd; but that by Cary is ſuperior.

DE SACY, Louis Iſaac le Maiſtre.

An eminently pious and learned Port-Royaliſt divine and biblical critic. Born at Paris 1613. He was ſhut up in the Baſtille in 1666 on account of his Janſeniſt doctrines. Died 1684. The New Teſtament, tranſlated by De Sacy, and known as the Teſtament de Mons, was condemned by Pope Clement IX. in 1668. De Sacy's verſion of Thomas à Kempis' De Imitatione has had 150 editions. His Commentary on the Scriptures has continued to maintain a high character. It is eſpecially valuable for unfolding the ſpiritual meaning of the ſacred text. De Sacy was aſſiſted in the work by Du Foſſé, Charles Huré, and Le Tourneaux. In the liſt of contents here ſubjoined, the part which each author took in the work is ſtated. Many editions have been printed, both of the original work and of abridgements. The edition of 1692 is the beſt; that of 1705–30, bound variouſly, in 40, 45, or 54 vol. 12°., is

DESCARTES (René).

Born 1596; died 1650. This great man ſhares with Bacon the honour of having given the death-blow to ſcholaſtic philoſophy. He was brought up by the Jeſuits; ſerved as a volunteer from 1616 to 1621 under the Prince of Orange, and ſeveral other commanders; and in 1629, after having travelled widely, ſettled for a time in Holland. Deſcartes ſubſequently returned to France, but ſome of his metaphyſical opinions excited a perſecution againſt him. He then accepted an invitation from Chriſtina of Sweden, to reſide at her court. Died at Stockholm ſhortly after his arrival in that capital. He is equally celebrated as a metaphyſician, a mathematician, and a writer.

DODD, William, D.D.

Born at Bourne, Lincolnſhire, 1729. Studied at Clare Hall, Cambridge. On entering into orders he became a popular preacher in London. Preſented to the living of Hockcliffe, Bedfordſhire, 1772. Having forged a bond on the Earl of Cheſterfield, he was executed 1777. He was a man of great talents, and a uſeful and agreeable writer; but ruined by habits of extravagance. His Commentary is a valuable work, founded on the manuſcript collections of Cudworth, Waterland, Clarendon, and others. The name of Locke is ſtated on the title-page, but Cudworth was the real author of the notes under that name; the miſtake ariſing from the MSS. being found in Locke's poſſeſſion.

DODWELL, Henry.

A very learned Nonjuror. Born in Dublin 1641, of Engliſh parents. Educated there, at Trinity College, of which he became Fellow. Settled in London 1674, and devoted himſelf chiefly to literary purſuits. Elected Camden's Profeſſor of Hiſtory at Oxford, but loſt that place at the Revolution, having refuſed to take the oaths to the new government. Died 1711. His induſtry was prodigious, as appears by the numerous books he publiſhed, and the great learning diſplayed in them; his ſtyle is conſidered obſcure and intricate.

Separation of churches from epiſcopal government, as practiſed by the preſent Nonconformiſts, proved ſchiſmatical from ſuch principles as are leaſt controverted, and do withal moſt popularly explain the ſinfulneſs and miſchief of ſchiſm. In this treatiſe the ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, the ſin unto death, and other difficult Scriptures, are occaſionally diſcourſed of, and ſome uſeful rules are given for explication of Scripture. 4°. Lond. 1679

Remarkable for fickleneſs in religious matters, which at length proved his ruin, otherwiſe he was a man of great abilities and learning. Born at Arba 1561. Educated at Padua. Entered among the Jeſuits, but left that ſociety and became Biſhop of Segni, and afterwards Archbiſhop of Spalato, in Dalmatia. Became diſaffected to the Church of Rome, which induced him to write his famous book De Republica Eccleſiaſtica in which he aimed a capital blow at the papal power. Came to England; joined the Church of England, and obtained the Deanery of Windſor, the Maſterſhip of the Savoy, and the living of Weſt Ildesley. Returned to Rome, and gave in a recantation 1622; but was thrown into priſon, where he died 1625.

DONNE, John.

An eminent divine and poet. Born in London, of Roman Catholic parents, 1573. Studied at Hart Hall, Oxford, Trinity College, Cambridge, and Lincoln's Inn. Became a Proteſtant at the age of nineteen. Entered into orders, and became Dean of St. Paul's, 1620, to which was added the vicarage of St. Dunſtan in the Eaſt. Died 1631. As a poet he is placed at the head of the metaphyſical claſs. As a preacher he was ranked very high by his contemporaries for pathos, dignity, and effect. His ſermons had fallen into neglect; but they have now riſen greatly in public eſteem. They were publiſhed in three folios, the firſt, dated 1640, the ſecond, 1649, and the third, 1660, all rare, but particularly the third. In the reprint 6 vol.

DUNS SCOTUS, John.

An eminent scholastic divine. Born about 1265, at Dunstance, near Alnwick, Northumberland. Some writers assert that his birth-place was Dunse, in Scotland; others, that he was an Irishman. Joined the Minorite friars, and studied at Merton College, Oxford, of which he became Fellow. Professor of Theology at Oxford 1301. Removed to Paris 1304; and was placed at the head of the theological schools there. Died at Cologne 1308. He is said to have been the first who affirmed the immaculate conception of the Virgin Mary. The only complete edition of his works is that of 1639.

DUPIN, Lewis Ellis.

A learned doctor of the Sorbonne, eminent as an eccléſiaſtical hiſtorian. Born at Paris 1657. Died 1719. He was Lecturer on Moral Philoſophy, and took an active part in all the meetings of the Theological Board of the Paris Univerſity. In addition to his great works he found time to write a variety of prefaces, diſquiſitions, and papers in the Journal des Savans, &c. He rendered himſelf conſpicuous as an opponent of the Bull Unigenitus, and by his moderation he gained the friendſhip of ſeveral Proteſtant divines, ſuch as Archbiſhop Wake. It is eſpecially as an hiſtorian that Du Pin is valuable. He had an uncommon talent at analyſing the works of an author, and he gives not only a hiſtory of the writers, but alſo the ſubſtance of what they wrote, in his Bibliothèque, of which the following is the beſt edition. It was reprinted in part in 21 thin vol. 4°.

Progreſs of metaphyſical and ethical philoſophy, by Dugald Stewart.

Progreſs of ethical philoſophy, chiefly during the 17th and 18th centuries, by Sir James Mackintoſh.

Progreſs of mathematical and phyſical ſcience, by John Playfair.

Progreſs of mathematical and phyſical ſcience, chiefly during the 18th century, by Sir John Leſlie.

This great repertory of human knowledge has continued ſince 1771 to accumulate the ever-increaſing treaſures of ſcience and literatare. It was firſt publiſhed in 3 vol. 4°. 1771; next in 10 vol. in 1778; in 18 vol. in 1797, to which was added the Supplement, in 2 vol. by Bp. Gleig, in 1801; this was followed by an edition in 20 vol. in 1810, and other two editions during the ſucceeding ten years; to which was added the celebrated Supplement, in 6 vol. 4°., edited by Profeſſor Napier, commenced in 1815 and finiſhed in 1824. The ſeventh edition, which was completed in 1842, embodied whatever remained valuable in the previous editions and in the Supplements, and was further enhanced in value by the contributions of men of eſtabliſhed reputation. An eighth edition is now in courſe of publication, edited by Profeſſor Traill, which will undergo careful reviſion and extenſive correction. Articles rendered imperfect by the lapſe of time will be ſubmitted for improvement to writers intimately converſant with the reſpective ſubjects, whilſt other articles will be ſuperſeded by entirely new contributions, and ſubjects not formerly embraced in its pages will be added. To the former Diſſertations will be added two New Diſſertations — the firſt by the Archbiſhop of Dublin, on the Riſe, Progreſs, and Corruptions of Chriſtianity; the ſecond by James D. Forbes, F.R.S., Profeſſor of Natural Philoſophy in the Univerſity of Edinburgh; being a continuation of the Diſſertations on the Progreſs of Phyſical Science to the preſent time.

EPHRAEM SYRUS, Saint.

An eminent Father of the Church of the fourth century. Born at Nisibis, in Syria. A pupil of St. James, bishop of Nisibis. Went to Edessa A.D. 363. Embraced a monastic life, and retired to a cavern in one of the adjacent mountains, where he composed most of his works. Died about 379. He obtained a high character for sanctity. The following is the only complete edition of his works, and is admirably edited. His sermons, in Greek only, were well edited by Thwaites at Oxford, 1709, in folio.

S. Pater Noster Ephraem Syrus. Opera omnia quæ exstant Græce, Syriace, Latine, in sex tomos distributa, ad MSS. codices Vaticanos alioque castigata, multis aucta, nova interpretatione, præfationibus, notis, variantibus lectionibus illustrata: nunc primum, sub auspiciis S. Bibliotheca Latina nunc melius delecta, rectius digeſta, et aucta diligentia J. A. Erneſti. 3 vol. 8°. Lipſ. 1773-74*
A fourth volume was intended, in order to include Chriſtian authors, but it has never appeared.
Firſt printed 1697 in 1 vol. 8°. A fifth edition, Hamburg, 1721–22, 3 vol. 8°., contains articles which have not been given in Erneſti's edition; but it is inconvenient to uſe, owing to the ſupplement and corrections contained in volumes 2 and 3. A reprint of it at Venice 1728, in 2 vol. 4°., is therefore preferred, in which the ſupplementary matter is incorporated.

Bibliotheca Latina mediæ et infimæ ætatis cum ſupplemento Chriſtiani Schoettgenii, editio à J. P. Manſi correcta, illuſtrata et aucta. 6 vol. in 3. 4°. Patavii, 1754*
Beſt edition of this eſteemed work. It was originally publiſhed at Hamburg 1734–46, in 6 vol. ſm. 8°.: the ſixth volume was by Schoettgenius.

Bibliotheca Græca, ſive notitia ſcriptorum veterum Græcorum, quorumcunque monumenta integra, aut fragmenta edita exſtant: tum plerorumque è MSS. ac deperditis. 14 vol. 4°. Hamb. 1718–1728
The beſt edition of this work, in a complete ſtate; vol. 1 being the third edition [1718], with additions, containing Empedoclis Sphæra and Mercelli Sidetæ carmen de medicamentis è piſcibus, Gr. et Lat. The edition edited by Harleſs has not been completed. It was commenced in 1790, the 12th and laſt volume publiſhed in 1811, only extends to page 544 in vol. 11 of the former edition; ſo that it would require four more volumes to finiſh it.

FACUNDUS Hermianensis.

Biſhop of Hermianum, in Aſia. Diſtinguiſhed by his reſolute defence at the Council of Conſtantinople 547, of the writings called the three chapters which the Council of Chalcedon had pronounced orthodox. The works ſo named were—1. The writings of Theodore of Mopſueta; 2. The books which Theodoret of Cyrus wrote; 3. The letter of Ibas of Edeſſa concerning the condemnation of Neſtorius. For this he was baniſhed by the Emperor Juſtinian. His ſtyle is animated, but deficient in moderation and correct reaſoning.

FÉNELON, François de Salignac de la Motte.

One of the ornaments of the Gallican Church. Born in 1651, at the castle of Fénélon, in Périgord. Entered into holy orders at the age of twenty-four. Was appointed Superior of the newly-converted Catholic ladies; and his success in this office induced Louis XIV. to send him on a mission to Poitou, amongst the Protestants. In 1689 he was nominated Tutor to the Duke of Burgundy. Archbishop of Cambray in 1694. Having espoused the cause of Madame Guyon, Fénélon was bitterly attacked by Bossuet, censured by the Pope, and discountenanced by the king, whom the liberal tendency of the celebrated Telemachus had irritated. Fénélon died in 1715.

FLÉCHIER, Esprit.

Born 1632; died 1710. A French divine. Celebrated for his sermons and funeral orations. The Duke of Montausier obtained for him the post of reader to the Dauphin. He was made Bishop of Lavaur in 1685; and of Nismes in 1687. In his episcopal character he gained the love of even the Protestants of his diocese by his uniform piety, charity, and mildness. Elected a Member of the French Academy in 1673. Fléchier has been called the French Isocrates. He is considered to have given neatness, regularity, softness, and harmony, to the language of the French pulpit; spirit, elegance, purity, justness, and delicacy of ideas, flowery and harmonious diction, are his most striking qualities. M. Gonod, librarian at Clermont, in Auvergne, published, in 1844, a work of Fléchier, which had never been printed before. The title is as follows: Mémoires sur les grands-jours tenus à Clermont en 1665–1666. 1 vol. 8°.

Œuvres complettes. Revues sur les manuscrits de l'auteur, augmentées de plusieurs pièces qui n'ont jamais été imprimées, et accompagnées de préfaces, d'observations, et de notes. 10 vol. 8°. à Nismes, 1782

A farther defence of infant-baptiſm: wherein the infant's right upon the parent's faith, is illuſtrated by thoſe miracles which Jeſus performed—the claim to baptiſm farther ſupported, from their being God's heritage—the commiſſion to go teach, baptizing, does not exclude them—and Rom. 6. 3, 4, Col. 2. 12, very abſurdly underſtood and applied by adult-baptizers to water-baptiſm. [Againſt] Dan. Dobel. Pp. 24. 8°. Lond. [1744]

The Pædo-baptiſt's ſenſe of Poſitive Inſtitutions, defended, againſt the objections and miſrepreſentations of an Adult-Baptiſt. With ſome miſtakes corrected. Pp. 69. 8°. Lond. [1745]

A diſſertation upon the unnatural crime of ſelf-murder: occaſioned by the many late inſtances of ſuicide in this city, &c. Together with an appendix that points out the inequality of ſome of our penal laws, which take away the life of man. F. 1. Pp. 44. 8°. Lond. 1773

FLEMING, Robert.

An eſteemed Preſbyterian divine. Born at Bathens, in Scotland, 1630. Educated at the Univerſity of Edinburgh. At St. Andrews he ſtudied divinity under the celebrated Samuel Rutherford. Became miniſter of Cambuſlang. Ejected 1662 for nonconformity. Went to Rotterdam about 1673. Died 1694. His Fulfilling of the Scripture is an intereſting and elaborate work; the beſt edition is that of 1726.

The fulfilling of the Scripture, complete in three parts.

1. An eſſay, ſhewing the exact accompliſhment of the word of God in his works of providence, as alſo many rare hiſtories of the works and ſervants of God.
2. The faithfulneſs of God conſidered and cleared in the great event of his word.
3. The great appearances of God for his Church under the New Teſtament; with many choice ſpeeches of ſuffering and dying Chriſtians.

With memoirs of the author's life, and a ſermon on the occaſion of his death [on 1 Cor. 15. 55–57.] By Daniel Burgeſs. Fifth edit. corrected. To which is added an index and a table of Scots phraſes. Fol. Lond. 1726

A diſcourſe of earthquakes, as they are premonitory ſigns to a nation, with a reſpect to what hath occurred in this year 1692 [on Pſa. 46. 1–3]. Sm. 8°. Lond. 1693

The confirming work of religion; or, its great things made plain by their primary evidences and demonſtrations. Sm. 8°. Lond. 1693

FLEMING, Robert.

Son of the preceding. Born and partly educated in Scotland. Studied afterwards at Leyden and Utrecht. Became miniſter of the Engliſh Church at Leyden, and afterwards of the Scotch Church at Amſterdam. In a few years he became Paſtor of a Scotch Church in Lothbury, London. Died 1716. He was a divine of great learning and talents, and eminently devout. His diſcourſe concerning the Riſe and Fall of the Papacy created much ſenſation in 1794 and alſo in 1848, from the remarkable coincidence between his conjecture reſpecting thoſe years and the events which then occurred.

FONTENELLE, Bernard le Bovier.

Born at Rouen 1657; died 1757. A writer diſtinguiſhed for the univerſality of his genius. His ſtyle is rather affected, and his learning not always very profound; but he has the talent of rendering intereſting the moſt abſtruſe ſubjects. His maſterpiece is the work On the Plurality of Worlds. The Hiſtory of the Oracles was entirely taken from Van Dale's book. Fontenelle became, in 1691, Member of the French Academy, and in 1699, Secretary of the Academy of Sciences.

FOXE, John.

The martyrologiſt. Born at Boſton 1517. Educated at Braſenoſe College, Oxford. Choſen Fellow of Magdalen College 1543. Having adopted the principles of the Reformers, he was expelled 1545. After being tutor in the family of Sir Thomas Lucy, and the unfortunate Earl of Surrey, he went abroad. Returned on the acceſſion of Queen Elizabeth. Prebendary of Saliſbury 1563; but did not accept further preferment, owing to his having ſome ſcruples about ceremonies. Died 1587. The firſt draft of his Acts and Monuments was an octavo volume, publiſhed at Straſburgh 1554, in Latin, entitled, "Commentarii rerum in eccleſia geſtarum, maximarumque per totam Europam perſecutionum à Wiclavi temporibus ad hanc uſque ætatem deſcriptarum," in one book. Reprinted, with other five books at Baſil, 1559, folio.

FULBERTUS Carnotensis [or, Folbert, Fulpert, Ulpert, Umber, Wlpert.]

One of the ornaments of the early Gallican Church. Flouriſhed in the eleventh century. Hiſtorians do not agree even about the leading particulars of his life. He was Biſhop of Chartres in 1007; and obtained the greateſt influence, both as a prelate, and as a writer. His works have been often reprinted. Fulbert's Doctrine on the Lord's Supper, according to Biſhop Coſin, was altogether conformable to that of the Primitive Church.

GATAKER, Thomas, B.D.

Born in London 1574. Entered St. John's College, Cambridge, at ſixteen. Preacher of Lincoln's Inn 1601. Rector of Rotherhithe 1611. Died 1654. He was one of the moſt learned divines of his time, and celebrated by Salmaſius, Colomies, and others, as having no ſuperior as a critic. He ſubſcribed the Covenant, but declared in favour of Epiſcopacy, and during the Commonwealth preferred the Preſbyterians to the Independents. In the Aſſembly's Annotations, he wrote on the Books of Iſaiah, Jeremiah, and Lamentations, ſo admirably that Calamy has obſerved that no commentator, ancient or modern, is entitled to higher praiſe.

GEDDES, Alexander, LL.D.

A Roman Catholic divine. Born at Ruthven, in Scotland, 1737. Studied at the Scotch College, Paris. Officiated as a prieſt in the north of Scotland 1764. Removed to London 1780; and obtained the patronage of Lord Petre, who engaged to allow him a ſalary of 200*l.* annually, in order that he might purſue his object of translating the Bible. On the publication of his firſt volume he was ſuſpended from all eccleſiaſtical functions. Died 1802. He was a man of extenſive learning, but vain. His tranſlation of the Scriptures, and critical remarks, are full of infidelity, yet they contain many uſeful philological criticiſms.

A treatiſe againſt ſuperſtitious Jeſu-worſhip. Wherein the true ſenſe of Phil. 2. 9, 10, is opened, and from thence is plainly ſhewed, and by ſundry arguments proved, that corporal bowing at the name of Jeſus is neither commanded, grounded, nor warranted thereupon. Ff. 3. Pp. 50. 4°. Lond. 1642

GILL, John, D.D.

A Baptiſt miniſter. Born at Kettering 1697, of parents in humble life. Received his education partly at the Grammar-ſchool there, but chiefly by his own application. Paſtor of a congregation at Horſleydown, Southwark, 1719. Died 1771. He was a divine of moſt extenſive learning, and particularly excelled in Hebrew and Rabbinical knowledge, which renders his commentary one of the moſt uſeful in the Engliſh language. His Calviniſm has been called ſupralapſarian; his ſtyle is in general too copious and diffuſe; as a preacher he was very popular.

GREGORY Nazianzen [or Theologus], Saint.
Born at Nazianzum, in Cappadocia, 324. Choſen Biſhop of Conſtantinople 378. Died 389. His piety was ardent and ſincere, his benevolence and charity boundleſs, an able champion againſt the Arians; his learning was profound, in eloquence he ſurpaſſed all his contemporaries, according to Dupin, in the purity of his words, the nobleneſs of his expreſſions, the ornaments of his diſcourſe, the variety of his figures, the juſtneſs of his compariſons, the beauty of his reaſonings, and the ſublimity of his thoughts. The beſt edition of his works is that of which the firſt volume was publiſhed in 1778, but, being interrupted by the firſt French Revolution, the ſecond was not printed until 1840.

GREGORY Nyssen, Saint.

An eminent Father of the Church, brother of St. Basil. Born in Cappadocia about 332. Ordained Bishop of Nyssa about 372. Having greatly opposed the Arians, he was banished by the Emperor Valens about 374. Recalled 378. Died 396. He was present at the second General Council which was held at Constantinople 382, and had a principal share in drawing up the Nicene Creed. He is highly extolled for the extent of his learning, the quickness of his parts, the persuasiveness of his eloquence, and the piety and sanctity of his life, but is accused of being affected, and of mingling philosophy with divinity. The best edition of his works is that of 1638; that of 1615, with an appendix published in 1618, is a good edition.

GREGORY Turonensis [Georgius Florentius].

Born in Auvergne 539; died 593. This prelate, who took the name of Gregorius on his appointment to the ſee of Tours, was one of the chief characters in the feuds which rent France during the ſixth century. He conſtantly acted as a mediator, a peace-maker, a protector of order. The merits of the chronicle compoſed by Gregorius Turonenſis are univerſally admitted. It is a clear, minute, and impartial work, throwing the greateſt light on the origins of the French nation. The following is the beſt edition.
